in making a present in place of paying a debt. In a certain sense the Chinese Minister is right. The United States is bound by law and treaty to compensate China for the acts of lawless American citizens by which Chinese residents suffer in person and aroperty, or it is not. If it is it should pay, and not conseal payment under the guise of charity; if it is not, it should give the reason why it is not. These reasons may be very briefly stated. The fundamental one is the fact that there is no reciprocity between the two countries in the matter of immigration. In all China there are a little over 600 Americans living in places designated by Chinese authorities. In the United States there are 154,000 Chinese, living wherin the Territories they are found everywhere. do not nek local consent nor pay much heed to local Our Government might point out the inequalities of residents or citizens, the Chinese must look to the ness all the privileges it confers upon native witisons with the understanding that the Chinese are insured against losses which natives have to take chunces with.

No limit is placed by China on the number of Americans who may settle in China; but the particular places at which they may settle are limited and defined. America, on the other hand, limits the number of Chinese immigrants but does not limit or define the places at which they may settle. If Americans do not come to China in larger numbers it is because the conditions are not such as to attract them; and the United States have for years past been taking action to make the conditions on that which she reached on the 9th instant, the steamer side such as shall not attract the Chinese. All this, however, has nothing to do with the question whether the citizens of the one country sustaining injury at the hands of a mob in the territory of the other has a right to demand compensation from the Government of the country in which the injury was exhibition of pictures in oil and water colours sustained. The claims of the Americans who ar fored loss on that occasion were made through their Consul, on the Government, and they were settled by the Government. This is a precedent which clearly governs the case as against the United States in the present instance. As to the American courts being open to the Chinese, the President bimself has characterised the pro-Chinese may be excused if under the circumstances they do not entertain much confidence in the civil courts, where, according to our San Francisco contemporary, they ought to seek their remedy. The Rangoon Gazette hears on reliable authority that decoity in the interior of Upper Burmah is as rampant as ever, if it is not positively increasing; and that, unless small Police and military posts of from 30 to 100 men are established throughout the districts in strategic positions, and commanding radii of 15 miles to protect the villages, villagers will probably soon be compelled to side with the dacoits who are now overrunning the country.

Though the French have officially aunounced that the port of Tamatave is open again to international commerce as it was before the late war, it is generally understood that there will b) one changed feature in future commercial transactions. The Custom House will remain in the hands of the French, and Frenchmon will collect the Customs dues probably for a long time to come. This fact is not without a sinister significance for the Hovas when the contents of the treaty lately agreed to by them and France is borne in mind.

Blondin, the rope walker, wishes to return to America and do some high feats, but his agent finds that the law would prevent a repetition of the Niagara or any lesser peril. A net would have to be spread underneath his rope and that would destroy the chief value of his performance. Blondin is living in London, at the age of sixtytwo, and of late years has lost much of his proporty by unfortunate invastments. His idea is stantly drilling and practising his troops outside that a tour in America would repleash his fortune, but his agent says that, in view of the unavoidable net, he will not come.

> Mermaids use telegraph cables as skippingropes, but wolves are scared by telegraph wires. From Norway it is reported that at a debate in the Storthing, while a vote was pending on a grant to a new line, a member remarked that, while his constituents had no direct interest in that however hungry a wolf may be he will never go to a spot that is enclosed by ropes stretched on posts. It is stated as a remarkable fact that since the first telegraphic line was established, 20 years ago wolves have never appeared in its neighbourhood. The tame animal has no such dread, for in California the telegraph wires, are constantly being prostrated owing to the fact that cows use the poles as scratching posts.

> There died lately in Paris, at the age of 103, Count Amorini Bolognini, who, for nearly a contury, was a general favourite in society at Florence joyed a certain notoriety. This difference in the length ingeniously represented the natural put on the shortest of the wigs: And on the evening of that day he would invariably cough five or six times when at his club, until a friend asked him: "You seem to have caught cold. The engagement of Miss Adele Grant to Earl Cairns (says the Philadelphia Press) is confirmed. He is generally known as Lord Garmoyle and noted for his payment of $50,000 to Miss Fortesons, a London astress, rather than submit to a suit for a breach of promise. He made a trip to this country immediately after that affair, and then his father died, leaving him an Earl. Ho is rich, his sire having been a man of active business. "Rien ne va plus!" is the cry of the croupler in the "clubs," when the bots are all made and the banker is ready to deal; and China Sugar Refining Company, Limited-$99 rien as va plus is a term well describing the general state of France just at present. Not to touch on the subject of the grave difficulties which France is encountering, the very condition of Paris is an evidence of decline. Once the gayest and brightest of cities, it has lately taken on a listless, slovenly, dispirited air, which any one will observe in an instant who may revisit it after an absence of twenty or thirty years. Many of the principal streets are frequented by chiracters who formerly would have been relegated to their native barrière; and the sort of profligacy which is now rendering the boulevard hideous by day and night is the immorality, not of prosperity, but penury. The glittering shops are losing their lastre, the fashionable restaurants are losing their fame, even the most popular theatres are fighting with failure. Paris, in a word, Paris, the soul of France, is "going off" in a manner almost painful to see. There have been, of course, many various reasons for this downward movement; but baccarat, as it is played in the French capital, has helped to bring it about.

For the credit of English law and procedure, (says the Law Times) we hope it will be a long time before another Crawford v. Dilke case comes into court. We cannot express our real opinion about everybody concerned in the judicial farce of Friday last. We may express sympathy with the Attorney-General and Sir Henry James, who had to make themselves so painfully and ostentatiously responsible for a client whose absence from the witness box was accounted for by, a rigid adherence to the technical necessities of the case. We may also sympathise with the Judge, who went beyond the necessities of the case, and referred to the possible state of the lady's mind, whose confession affected the co-respondent. Probably there has never been a case where the weaknesses of it as against one party were so startling and so transparent, or which was so dominated by a pervading desirs for one result above all others. Why the counsel who represented the co-respondent were allowed to do more than submit that there was no case, it is difficult to understand. If there was no case to answer, no excuse was needed for not calling the co-respondent. The one practical result is, that the respondent was guilty of edultery with somebody, but not with the only person implicated by her confession.

The High Commissioner for the Dominion of Canada, Sir Charles Tupper, accompanied by the Agenta-General of the various Australian Colonies, waited upon Earl Granville, Secretary of State for the Colonies, at the Colonial Office r cently, to point out the possible results which might follow from the recent treaty between France and Germany by the terms of which the latter power agreed not to interfere with the acquisition by the French Republic of the New Hebrides. Lord Granville states that the French Government has already been communicated with by the Foreign Office and it had replied that it was aware of the arrangement and would respect it. He had no reason whatever to apprehend that France had any design on the New Hebrides. The British Government was quite aware of the strong objection entertained by the, people of Australia to any fresh acquisition by foreign powers of territory in the South Pasific, and every effort would be made to insure their wishes being carried out. This is the first occasion that Causda has joined with the Aus tralian Colonies in matters connected with the Pacific Ocean, the Government of the Dominion now regarding itself, since the completion of the Cauadian Pacific Railroad, as having an important interest in that ocean and the islands it contains.

A correspondent writes from Odess in

This year, after it had taken place at Yasnogorodkee. a village in the Government of Kieff, the officiating priest, as usual, went round to the various hamlets in the district with some of the holy water to sprinkle upon the people and their dwellings. That being done, and a prayer offered up, he presented the cross to the people for them to kiss. (The crucifix is not accepted in the Russian Church.) But the inhabitants of one of these hamlets, being Stundists (Puritans or Huguenots), protested against the aspersion, and refused to kies the cross. When the priest and his deacon returned to Yasnogorodkee and related to their fellow-villagers, who had remained at home. what had happened, a drunken saint called out.

"I was employed," lowers armed themselves with cudgels, marched she says, "in the work of a large farmhouse. Overwork brought on sick headsche, followed by a deathly fainting and sickness of the stomach, until I was unable to retain either food or drink. I was compalled to take to my bed for several weeks. Getting a little better from rest and quiet, I sought to do some work, but was soon taken with a pain in my side, which in a little while seemed to spread over my whole body, and throbbed in my every limb. This was followed by a cough and shortness of breath, until finally I could not sew, and I took to my bad for the CLARETS, CHAMPAGNE. second, and, as I thought, for the last time. For Honolulu—56 packages of Seigel's Syrup, which I took exactly accounting to directions, and I had not taken the whole of it before I felt a great change for the better. My last illness began June 3rd, 1882, and continued to August 9th, when I began to take the Syrup. - Very soon-I-could do a little work. The cough left me, and I was no more troubled in breathing. Now I am perfectly cured. And oh, how happy I am! I cannot express gratitude enough for Seigel's Syrup. Now I must tell you that the doctors in our district distributed handbills cautioning people against the medicine, telling them it would do them no good, Seigel pamphlets; but now, wherever one is to be found, it is kept like a relic. The few preserved are borrowed to read, and I have lent mine for six miles around our district. People have come eighteen miles to get me to buy the medicine for them, knowing that it cured me, and to be sure to get the right kind. I know a woman who was looking like death, and who told them there was no help for her, that she had consulted several dectors, but none could help her. I told her of Seigel's Syrup, and wrote the name down for her that she might make no mistake. She took my advice and the Syrup, and now she is in perfect health, and the people around as are amazed. The medicine has made such progress in our neighbourhood that people say they don't want the doctor any more, but they take the Syrup. Sufferers from gout who were confined to their bed and could hardly move a finger, have been cured by it. There is a girl in our district who caught a cold by going through some water, and was in bed five years with costiveness and rheumatic pains, and had to have an attendant to watch by her. There was not a doctor in the surreguding districts to whom her mother had not applied to relieve her child. but every one crossed themselves and said they could not help her. Whenever the little bell rang which is rung in our place when somebody is dead, we thought surely it was for her, but Seigel's Syrup and Pills saved her life, and now she is as healthy as anybody, goes to church, and can work even in the fields. Everybody was astonished when they saw her out, knowing how many years she had been in bed. To-day she Seigel's Syrup." MARIA HAAR The people of England speak confirming the
